

Modules are collections of resources that, together with a configured provider, form a sort of "black box". As a user of the module, you do not need to know what the module is actually doing, you just need to set the variables it requires, and consume any desired outputs